Derailled? Get Back on Track

If you fall off a bicycle, do you wait a few weeks to try riding again? No – you get right back on the bike. The same is true for mindful eating and exercise habits.... if you give in to temptation or fall back into old, unhealthy habits, then the best thing to do is get right back on track with those healthier eating and activity habits!

It throws us curveballs that can give an added element of challenge when trying to make lifestyle changes.

Perhaps you’re away from home...away from your trusty new healthy eating “tools” (fridge, oven/stove, healthy go-to foods) within easy reach. Maybe you’re assigned a big project at work that requires longer work hours and less time for food prep and/or workouts.

Find a way to “go with the flow”...to “bend with the wind” so that those curveballs in your life don’t throw you completely out of your game.

Practice makes perfect! So, practicing your healthier food habits in a new environment is an important step in the lifestyle change process. When possible, look for ways to exercise while working or on breaks. Your strategy might have to change, but the key is to persist! Do NOT give up! Remind yourself of the success you’ve already had in making positive lifestyle changes. Let those successes fuel your resolve to stick with these changes, despite the challenges you may be faced with.

Remember: when derailed, don’t delay getting back on the right track. Take it one meal, snack, or workout at a time. How good you will feel when you succeed in spite of life’s hurdles!

Focus on Fitness  by Amy Hill, MS, ACSM-CPT

As the summer season comes to a close, the school bells ring and nature begins to show off its beautiful color palette. This Fall, don’t forget to remain consistent with your physical activity during the hustle and bustle of daily life.

The autumn toned hues are a beautiful backdrop for outdoor activities. Try to enjoy the sights and smells with a walk through the park or huddle up for a “gentle” game of football with family and friends.

Physical Activity doesn’t have to feel like work, you can still enjoy it as well as reap its healthful benefits.

Just remember to follow the guidelines of your post-surgical stage and your activity will not only be enjoyable but safe too!
“Plop, plop, fizz, fizz, oh what a relief it is…” You remember the old jingle for Alka-Seltzer, that effervescent product that was marketed as a cure-all for minor aches, pains, and indigestion. Well, if you’ve had a surgical weight-loss procedure, “fizz” is the last thing that will help you feel better.

Whether someone’s had gastric bypass, sleeve gastrectomy, or an adjustable gastric band placed, carbonated beverages, like soda pop, should be avoided. These beverages contain carbon dioxide, which adds a sort of effervescence or “bubbles” that some people may enjoy. But, it is this effervescence that can wreak havoc with the newly formed stomach pouch.

Carbonated beverages pull excess air into the stomach. This can cause stomach upset, nausea, and excess gas. There is also a risk of seriously damaging the stomach pouch if extreme nausea and/or vomiting occurs immediately after the operation.

Over time, this excess air can cause the stomach, or the opening between the stomach and intestines, to stretch, which can increase hunger and result in weight re-gain.

The best beverage options are those that are completely free of carbonation (bubbles), contain no caffeine, and have no more than 5 grams of sugar per serving. Get in the habit of reading nutrition and ingredient labels to know what you’re putting in your body.

Aim to get 48 to 64 ounces of such fluids each day. Water is the best choice, but if you get bored with drinking plain water, try adding fruit or herbs to your water, such as orange or lemon slices, fresh berries, or fresh mint leaves. You can also add a calorie free sweetener or flavored water packet if you prefer.

Staying hydrated following surgery is an important goal. Just make sure your choice of hydration doesn’t end up causing you more trouble than it’s worth!

I started lifting weights along with the running and I LOV ED the way my body was changing & the way I felt! I had energy and focus; my self-esteem went through the roof!

Just 7 months after surgery, in time for my 10th wedding anniversary, I reached a milestone of rockin’ the little black dress I had bought BEFORE surgery as my “goal” dress. Now, 10 months after surgery, I weigh 176 lbs (total loss so far of 111 lbs) & have 21 lbs left before I reach my final goal weight. Nobody even recognizes me and my husband says that I’m a completely different person who now embraces life. He is so right! Having bariatric surgery was one of the best decisions I’ve ever made in my life!

At 32 years old... I realized I was on a downward spiral that I couldn’t stop.
